NOTICE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY EXEMPTION

TO THE DEFENDANT(S): Tennessee law provides a ten thousand dollar ($10,000) personal property exemption as well as a homestead exemption from execution or seizure to satisfy a judgment. The amount of the homestead exemption depends upon your age and the other factors which are listed in TCA §26-2-301. If a judgment should be entered against you in this action and you wish to claim property as exempt, you must file a written list, under oath, of the items you wish to claim as exempt with the clerk of the court. The list may be filed at any time and may be changed by you thereafter as necessary; however, unless it is filed before the judgment becomes final, it will not be effective as to any execution or garnishment issued prior to the filing of the list. Certain items are automatically exempt by law and do not need to be listed; these include items of necessary wearing apparel (clothing) for your self and your family and trunks or other receptacles necessary to contain such apparel, family portraits, the family Bible, and school books. Should any of these items be seized you would have the right to recover them. If you do not understand your exemption right or how to execute it, you may wish to seek the counsel of a lawyer. Please state file number on list.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

399. At all times relevant hereto, Plaintiffs were residents and citizens of Blount County, Tennessee. The Train Derailment that is the subject matter of this action occurred in Blount

County, Tennessee, and the Plaintiffs' interests in real property subject to damages in this action are located in Blount County, Tennessee.

400. Defendant CSXT owns and operates a railroad in Blount County, Tennessee, and at all times relevant to this case operated trains within and through Blount County, Tennessee, on a daily basis. Defendant maintains a registered agent in the State of Tennessee and is subject to the jurisdiction of this Court, pursuant to Tenn. Code Ann. § 20-2-201.

401. Defendant UTLX at all times relevant to this case owned and leased tank cars transported within and through Blount County, Tennessee, on a regular basis, and leased tank cars to businesses operating in Tennessee. Defendant maintains a registered agent in the State of Tennessee and is subject to the jurisdiction of this Court, pursuant to Tenn. Code Ann. § 20-2-201.

402. Defendants Michael Puckett and Ralph Brackett are citizens and residents of the State of Tennessee and are subject to this Court's jurisdiction.

403. This Court also has jurisdiction, pursuant to Tenn. Code Ann. § 16-10-110, over this action to recover damages for a nuisance.

404. Venue is proper in Blount County, pursuant to Tenn. Code Ann. § 20-4-104, because Plaintiffs reside here and suffered damages from the Train Derailment, which occurred in Blount County.

FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

405. On July 1, 2015, Defendant CSXT was operating a train consisting of two locomotives, 45 loaded rail cars carrying mixed freight, and 12 empty rail cars, traveling from Cincinnati, Ohio, to Waycross, Georgia. The CSXT train included 27 rail cars that were carrying hazardous substances, specifically, nine with acrylonitrile, sixteen with propane and two with asphalt.

406. Shortly before midnight on July 1, 2015, one of the rail cars carrying acrylonitrile derailed north of the Singleton Station Road crossing in Blount County, Tennessee. CSXT then dragged the derailed car approximately 9 miles before eventually stopping the train near Old Mount Tabor Road, located off of Highway 321 and just west of the Foothills Mall in Maryville, Tennessee. At or about the Mount Tabor Road crossing, around 9 miles from the point of derailment, the tank car was ruptured and caught fire while the CSXT train continued to drag it.

407. The rail car derailed as a result of a wheel roller bearing's failure due to overheating, which resulted in the bearing failing and burning off.

408. CSX's nearest trackside overheat sensor (called a "defect detector" or "hot-box detector") failed to detect the overheated wheel roller bearing. The bearing overheated and burned off approximately 17 miles after passing the detector at Mile Post 265.4. The distance between the detector at MP 265.4 and the next detector at MP 292.0 is 26.6 miles.

409. The CSXT Dispatcher on duty at the time of the derailment noticed on his computer screen tracking the train that the side track switch north of Singleton Station Road crossing just south of the point of derailment was damaged while the train was passing over it. He did not report this to the CSXT crew or stop the train as required by CSXT Operating Rules, and, as a result, CSXT failed to stop the train in time to prevent the tank car from rupturing and catching fire.

410. The CSXT Dispatcher was not trained or supervised by CSXT to recognize the obvious connection between the damage to the switch and dragging equipment from the derailed tank car passing over it or the necessity to stop the train in accordance with CSXT Operating Rules.

411. The CSXT crew failed to look back frequently to inspect for the condition of the train and tank cars from which it would have been obvious that the locomotive was dragging a derailed tank car, despite the presence of several sections of track during the 9 miles after the derailment where there were unobstructed lines of sight from the locomotive cab to the derailed tank car. As a result of the metal parts of the derailed tank car dragging on concrete crossties, metal rails, and switch components, a large shower of sparks would have been visible to the crew at several locations had they been looking back as required by CSXT Operating Rules. As a result, CSXT failed to stop the train in time to prevent the tank car from rupturing and catching fire.

412. The CSXT crew was not trained or supervised by CSXT on the necessity of frequently looking back to inspect their train as the last line of defense to prevent a disaster with a hazardous materials "Key Train," which was the designation of the CSXT train that derailed on July 1, 2015.

413. If not before, the CSXT crew did see the sparks from the derailed tank car after dragging it approximately 5-6 miles from the point of derailment. However, the crew did not stop the train, although required to do so by CSXT Operating Rules. As a result, CSXT failed to stop the train in time to prevent the tank car from rupturing and catching fire.

414. The CSXT crew was not trained or supervised by CSXT on the safe course to take when seeing sparks coming from a tank car in a hazardous materials "Key Train." Instead, they were trained by CSXT to ignore CSXT Operating Rules, which require taking the "safe course" when there is uncertainty.

415. The tank car that derailed and caught fire, UTLX 901717, was owned at the time of the derailment by Defendant UTLX, and was leased by CSXT for the transport of acrylonitrile.

416. UTLX manufactured the subject tank car in 1994, at which time it installed the wheelset which included the bearing that overheated and burned off.

417. The tank car was manufactured and qualified under federal hazardous materials rules for transporting acrylonitrile, a hazardous material.

418. Normal roller bearing life is approximately 10 years due to grease (lubrication) life limitations. However, at the time of the derailment, the failed roller bearing had been in service on UTLX 901717 for 21 years.

419. UTLX was required to bring the subject tank car into a qualified shop to inspect, repair, and qualify the car every 10 years. Qualifying the car means that UTLX certifies that it meets all the same requirements under federal rules as a new tank car.

420. UTLX last brought the subject tank car to its shop in Cleveland, Texas, in 2013, where it spent over two months inspecting and repairing the car before qualifying the car in October 2013. UTLX certified that the car met all of the requirements under federal rules as a new car by imprinting a stencil on the car with the qualification date and the next qualification date of December 2023.

421. At the time of the 2013 qualification, the subject wheel bearing was 19 years old. UTLX knew or should have known the age of the bearing and the need for replacement at this time, but did not replace it despite replacing another wheelset on the tank car, including its roller bearings. UTLX would not have been required to bring the tank car to its shop again for inspections, repairs and qualification for another 10 years at which time the bearings on the subject tank car would have been 29 years old.

422. UTLX does not have a system for systematically tracking the age of the roller bearings on its tank cars, including those in hazardous materials service, and does not request information from bearing manufacturers about the useful life of roller bearings. Instead, it assumes that the wheels will be replaced before the bearings become defective.

423. UTLX also does not have a system for tracking bearing failures on its tank cars. It has no knowledge of how often bearings fail on its tank cars or the reasons for the failures.

424. UTLX has been aware since before 2015 that hot bearing detectors often fail to detect overheated roller bearings before they fail, among other reasons, because some railroads space them too far apart. In order to prevent derailments from overheated roller bearings on tank cars transporting hazardous materials, UTLX has worked with at least one hazardous materials manufacturer to install onboard hot bearing detectors on the bearing itself, which transmit an immediate signal to the crew or to a centralized computer when a bearing overheats. Despite having this technology available, UTLX failed to install it on the tank car which derailed and caught on fire in Maryville, Tennessee.

425. CSXT knew the contents of the rail car that derailed, ruptured, and caught fire and was required to inspect the rail car before the operation of the train that resulted in the derailment and toxic chemical fire on July 1, 2015. CSXT's inspection of the subject tank car roller bearings in Cincinnati before the subject train departed for Waycross was inadequate, because it failed to detect obvious signs that the seal on the mate bearing on the same axle was leaking grease. It is likely that the subject bearing failed as a result of the same failure pathway as was evident in the mate bearing.

426. CSXT did not notify first responders of the identity of the chemical contained in the ruptured tank car, the immediate hazards to health, the risks of fire or explosion, the immediate precautions to be taken in the event of an accident or incident, the immediate methods for handling fires, or the immediate methods for protecting against the hazards of exposure to the released chemicals until at least an hour after the Train Derailment and toxic chemical fire.

427. Acrylonitrile has been classified by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency ("EPA") as a probable human carcinogen. Acute (short-term) exposure to acrylonitrile via inhalation causes mucous membrane irritation, headaches, nausea, feelings of apprehension and nervous irritability, limb weakness, labored and irregular breathing, dizziness and impaired judgment, cyanosis, nausea, collapse, and convulsions. Chronic (longer-term) exposure can result in lung cancer, headaches, fatigue, nausea, and weakness.

428. As a result of the derailment and the resulting fire, the combustion of acrylonitrile produced hydrogen cyanide gas, which can be rapidly fatal to people if inhaled in high concentrations. Lower concentrations affect the central nervous system (brain), the cardiovascular system (heart and blood vessels), and the pulmonary system (lungs).

429. A CSXT hazardous materials team did not arrive on the scene until over 2.5 hours after the Train Derailment.

430. CSXT did not control, mitigate, or remediate the release or extinguish the fire, but instead allowed it to burn, resulting in the spread of toxic smoke and particulates over a wide area, including the property of the Plaintiffs and members of the proposed Class. CSXT allowed the UTLX rail car to burn for approximately twenty (20) hours, releasing dense clouds of toxic and noxious smoke, fumes, and vapors into the air.

431. At least 87 people were forced to seek medical treatment at Blount Memorial Hospital in Maryville for symptoms related to exposure to the fire, including respiratory issues, skin irritation, and nausea, and at least 36 people were admitted to the hospital for further observation. At least ten first responders were also treated at the hospital after breathing the fumes, and had to go through a lengthy decontamination process and overnight observation.

432. The ruptured UTLX rail car released acrylonitrile and other toxic chemicals to the soil, ground water and surface water, contaminating at least one drinking water well and contaminating Culton Creek, causing a fish kill.

433. As a result of the derailment and the release of acrylonitrile into the surrounding environment, government officials warned residents near the derailment site not to drink well water due to concerns about groundwater contamination.

434. Over 5,000 people were ordered to evacuate from their homes and businesses within about 2 miles from the Train Derailment, while other residents were required to shelter in place in their homes. Shelters were opened by the local governments, and hundreds of people spent the night in the shelters. Others found their own accommodations outside the area. Numerous businesses were closed and highways were blocked in the area surrounding the evacuation zone.

435. The mandatory evacuation lasted from the early morning of July 2, 2015 until the evening of July 3, 2015.

436. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) stated that evacuees returning to their homes should be told that the smoke from the toxic chemical fire contained soot and particles that may have settled on their yard or gotten into their house and that smoke or fumes may have gotten trapped in their house.

437. After the derailment, CSXT failed to properly investigate the cause of the derailment, which is indicative of a culture and past inactions failing to implement measures for prevention of derailments caused by overheated wheel bearings. In fact, CSXT had over 60 derailments resulting from overheated wheel bearings in the past 10 years but has not implemented measures that would have prevented the derailment in Maryville, Tennessee, which is at issue in this matter.

438. Shortly after the derailment, CSXT asked both the engineer and conductor to provide written statements about what happened. CSXT produced the conductor's short, written statement, but failed to produce the statement of the engineer, who is the crew member who saw sparks while dragging the derailed tank car. CSXT intentionally destroyed, concealed, or recklessly mishandled this statement containing material evidence with the purpose of wrongfully evading liability in this case.

COUNT II (Negligence)

446. The foregoing Paragraphs of this Complaint are hereby re-alleged and incorporated by reference herein.

447. Defendant CSXT owes a duty of care to Plaintiffs to design, operate, inspect, maintain, and repair its trains and railroad tracks used in the transport of toxic chemicals so as to prevent derailments that would cause fires and release toxic chemicals into the surrounding community, including the duty to comply with all applicable federal and state regulations and industry safety standards. Defendant knew or reasonably should have known a breach of these duties would result in damages to Plaintiffs of the types which actually occurred in Maryville, Tennessee.

448. Defendant CSXT owes a duty of care to Plaintiffs to adequately inspect rail cars by a qualified inspector before operating a train, including a duty to comply with 49 C.F.R. §§ 215.11, 215.13, CSXT Operating Rules, and industry standards.

449. Defendant CSXT owes a duty of care to Plaintiffs to prevent rail cars with defective roller bearings from being placed into service or continued in service, including a duty to comply with 49 C.F.R. § 215.115, CSXT Operating Rules, and industry standards.

450. Defendant CSXT owes a duty of care to Plaintiffs to maintain devices capable of detecting overheated rail car wheel roller bearings during operation of a train, including a duty to comply with CSXT Operating Rules and industry standards.

451. Defendant CSXT and its crew owe a duty of care to Plaintiffs to keep a lookout during operation of a train so that it can determine if a rail car has derailed and immediately stop a train if a derailment has occurred, including a duty to comply with CSXT Operating Rules and industry standards.

452. Defendant CSXT owes a duty of care to Plaintiffs to adequately train and supervise its crew and its dispatchers to comply with CSXT Operating Rules.

453. Defendant CSXT and its crew owe a duty of care to Plaintiffs to immediately identify the toxic chemicals involved in the derailment of tank cars and chemical fires and to immediately report the identity of the chemicals to emergency responders so that they can avoid exposure to the toxic chemicals, including a duty to comply with 49 C.F.R. §§ 172.600, 172.602, CSXT Operating Rules and industry standards.

454. Defendant CSXT also owes a duty of care to Plaintiffs to control, mitigate, and remediate toxic chemical releases from derailment of its trains and to extinguish toxic chemical fires as quickly and safely as possible.

455. Defendant CSXT also owes a duty of care to Plaintiffs to investigate train derailments in a manner that emphasizes prevention of derailments in accordance with federal rules and CSXT Operating Rules. This includes recognizing and investigating human factors causing derailments.

456. Among other breaches, Defendant CSXT breached its duty of care to Plaintiffs by failing to adequately inspect the tank car that derailed on July 1, 2015, prior to operation of the train, including violation of 49 C.F.R. §§ 215.11, 215.13, CSXT Operating Rules, and industry standards.

457. Among other breaches, Defendant CSXT breached its duty of care to Plaintiffs by failing to prevent the UTLX tank car with defective roller bearings from being placed into service or continued in service, including violation of 49 C.F.R. § 215.115, CSXT Operating Rules, and industry standards.

458. Among other breaches, Defendant CSXT breached its duty of care to Plaintiffs by failing to maintain devices capable of detecting overheated rail car wheel roller bearings during operation of the train that derailed, including violation of CSXT Operating Rules and industry standards.

459. Among other breaches, Defendant CSXT and its crew, Defendants Puckett and Brackett, breached their duty of care to Plaintiffs by failing to keep adequate lookout and immediately stop the train during the 9 miles CSXT dragged the derailed car before the derailed tank car ruptured and caught fire, which is also violation of CSXT Operating Rules and industry standards.

460. Among other breaches, Defendant CSXT and its crew, Defendants Puckett and Brackett, breached their duty of care to Plaintiffs to immediately identify the toxic chemicals involved in the derailment of tank cars and chemical fires, to immediately report the identity of the chemicals to emergency responders, and to warn emergency responders of the hazard associated with exposure to such chemicals, which is also a violation of 49 C.F.R. §§ 172.600, 172.602, CSXT Operating Rules and industry standards.

461. Among other breaches, Defendant CSXT breached its duty of care to Plaintiffs by failing to adequately train and supervise its crew and its dispatchers to comply with CSXT Operating Rules.

462. Among other breaches, Defendant CSXT breached its duty of care to Plaintiffs by failing to control, mitigate, and remediate the release of toxic chemicals and by failing to extinguish the toxic chemical fire as quickly and safely as possible.

463. Among other breaches, Defendant CSXT breached its duty of care to Plaintiffs by failing to investigate train derailments resulting from overheated bearings in a manner designed to prevent such derailments. The investigation in the instant case is indicative of the failure to adequately investigate, inter alia, human factors that would have prevented the derailment and resulting chemical fire, as are the 60 derailments resulting from overheated bearings on CSXT trains in the past 10 years.

464. Each of the breaches of duty set out above were a cause in fact and a proximate cause of damages to Plaintiffs, including damages to their property.

465. Defendant UTLX owes a duty of care to Plaintiffs to manufacture, inspect, maintain, repair and qualify its tank cars, including the wheel roller bearings, used in the transport of toxic chemicals so as to prevent derailments and prevent rupture of the tank cars that would cause fires and release toxic chemicals into the surrounding community, including the duty to adequately inspect its rail cars when they are in its shop for qualification, as required by 49 C.F.R. 180.509(k), and before they are placed in service, as required by 49 C.F.R. §§ 215.11 and 215.13; the duty to prevent rail cars with defective roller bearings from being placed into service or continued in service, as required by 49 C.F.R. § 215.115; the duty to incorporate available measures in the construction of its tank cars that are effective in detecting overheated roller bearings and preventing derailments of rail cars transporting hazardous materials; and the duty to comply with industry standards. Defendant UTLX knew or reasonably should have known a breach of these duties would result in damages to Plaintiffs of the types which actually occurred in Maryville, Tennessee.

466. Among other breaches, Defendant UTLX breached its duty of care to Plaintiffs with regard to its tank car that derailed by: failing to replace the old roller bearing that overheated and failed by failing to properly inspect the old roller bearing on the subject tank car to prevent the failure, in violation of 49 C.F.R. §§ 215.11 and 215.13; by failing to prevent the subject tank car with defective roller bearing(s) from being placed into service or continued in service, in violation of 49 C.F.R. § 215.115; and by failing to install onboard hot bearing detectors on the subject tank car despite knowledge of the hazardous materials it carried and the inadequacy of other preventive measures, including trackside hot bearing detectors. These breaches were a cause in fact and a proximate cause of damages to Plaintiffs.

467. Defendants CSXT and UTLX combined and concurred in the operation, inspection, maintenance, or repair of the tank car that caused and contributed to the Train Derailment and toxic chemical fire.

468. The applicable federal regulations set out above were each enacted to protect a Class of citizens which includes the Plaintiffs. The damages to Plaintiffs are of the types that are prohibited by these statutes and regulations. Therefore, Defendants' violations constitute negligence per se.

469. If Defendants' violations of statutes and regulations do not constitute negligence per se, they are strong evidence of negligence, in that the statutory and regulatory requirements violated by Defendants establish a minimum duty of care which was breached by Defendants.

470. At all times relevant to this matter, Defendant CSXT was in control of the train that derailed, the UTLX car that ruptured and caught fire, and the tracks upon which the train was operated. The derailment and fire that occurred are the types of occurrences that do not ordinarily occur in the absence of negligence, and therefore, under Tennessee law and the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, the jury can infer negligence.

471. Defendants' negligence is the proximate cause of damages to Plaintiffs and other members of the Class in the form of real property damage, personal property damage, loss of income, out of pocket expenses, loss of use and enjoyment of property, aggravation and inconvenience, and fear, anxiety and mental anguish.

COUNT III (Recklessness and Punitive Damages)

472. The foregoing Paragraphs of this Complaint are hereby re-alleged and incorporated by reference herein.

473. The failure of the CSXT crew to comply with CSXT Operating Rules by frequent onboard visual inspections of both sides of the train to detect the overheated roller bearing and the derailed tank car and their failure to stop the train after noticing sparks while they dragged the derailed tank car for 9 miles from the point of derailment constitutes recklessness.

474. As a direct and proximate result of the recklessness of the CSXT crew, the tank car ruptured and caught fire, resulting in injury to the Plaintiffs and the Class Members.

475. CSXT is vicariously liable for the recklessness of the CSXT crew, because CSXT was reckless in supervising and training them. CSXT failed to train and supervise the crew about the necessity and importance of frequent onboard visual inspections of both sides of the train. CSXT also improperly trained and supervised the crew such that the crew did not stop the train immediately after seeing sparks from the derailed tank car, in violation of CSXT Operating Rules. CSX's recklessness in supervising and training the CSXT crew was the proximate cause of the reckless behavior of the CSXT crew.

476. The failure of the CSXT crew to identify the toxic chemical involved in the derailment of the tank car and chemical fire and to provide information on the hazards of the toxic chemical and proper emergency response for over an hour constitutes recklessness.

477. As a direct and proximate result of the recklessness of the CSXT crew, the toxic chemical fire, the resulting smoke, vapors, and fumes, and the area and length of time of the evacuation were extended, causing further injury to the Plaintiffs and the Class Members.

478. CSXT is vicariously liable for the recklessness of the CSXT crew, because CSXT was reckless in supervising and training the crew. CSXT recklessly failed to train the crew of a hazardous materials "Key Train" to respond to the toxic chemical fire in a manner which complied with federal hazardous materials regulations and CSXT Operating Rules. CSXT's recklessness was the proximate cause of the reckless behavior of the CSXT crew.

479. The failure of UTLX to track and replace old, defective wheel bearings on its tank cars constitutes recklessness.

480. The failure of UTLX to replace the old, defective wheel bearing by replacing all four wheelsets when it replaced one wheelset during the time in the UTLX shop in 2013 constitutes recklessness.

481. As a result of the recklessness of CSXT and UTLX, the Plaintiffs and the Class Members are entitled to recover punitive damages.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs pray the Court as follows:

1. Award Plaintiffs damages in the amount greater than Twenty-five Thousand Dollars ($25,000) each sufficient to compensate them for real property damage, personal property damage, loss of income, out of pocket expenses, loss of use and enjoyment of property, aggravation and inconvenience, and fear, anxiety and mental anguish.

2. Award punitive damages to the Plaintiffs in an amount greater than One Million Dollars ($1,000,000) sufficient to punish CSXT and deter similar misconduct in the future by the CSXT and others. The cap on the amount of punitive damages in Tenn. Code Ann. § 29-39-104(a)(5) does not apply because CSXT intentionally destroyed or concealed records containing material evidence with the purpose of wrongfully evading liability in this case.

3. Award attorney fees and costs and expenses incurred in connection with the litigation of this matter.

4. Award such other and further relief as this Court may deem just, proper, and equitable.

A JURY IS DEMANDED TO TRY THIS CASE.

Respectfully submitted this 29th day of June, 2018.
